

How to Stay Alive While Swimming

Swim in a safe place, preferably near trained life guards.

Don't go beyond your depth, even in boat, if you can't swim.

Look before you leap. Be sure water is safe and plenty deep.

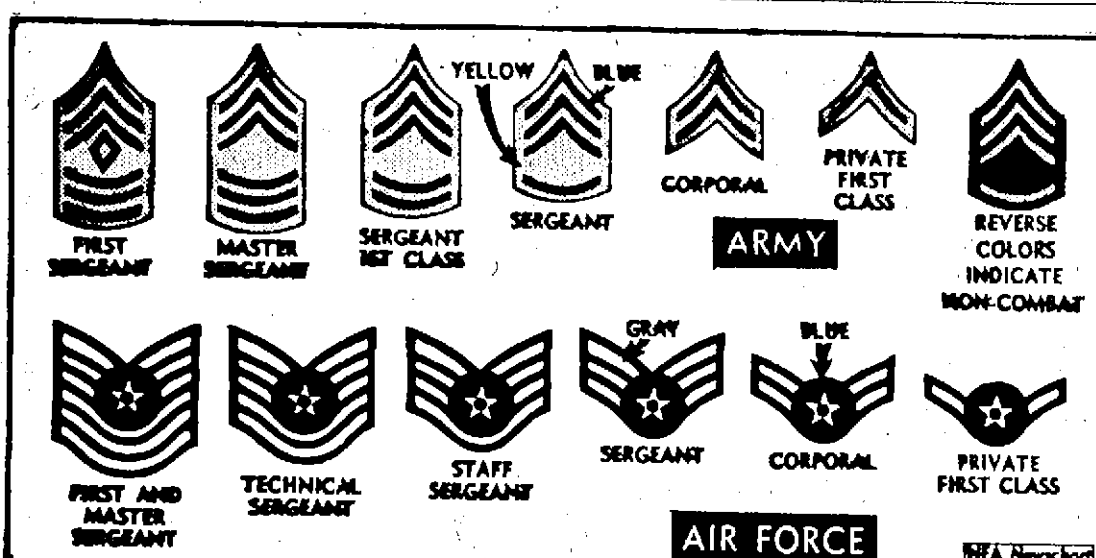

Don't "show off"; it's the surest way to hurt yourself.

Stay out if too hot or tired; Don't swim alone, and don't wait two hours after eating; stay in the water too long.

Don't swim alone, and don't wait two hours after eating; stay in the water too long.

YOU'LL SEE MORE OF THESE—Recent changes in the sleeve insignia of Army and Air Force enlisted men have left even ex-G.I.s confused about relative ranks in the services. Above are current insignia for non-commissioned officers of the Army and Air Force. Air Force chevrons were completely re-designed, while the major change in Army insignia was omission of the old three-stripe sergeant chevron, and the use of reverse colors for non-combat branches.

Community News from California

Mrs. Harold Priem

Richard Chambers began his new job as night policeman in California Tuesday night, July 10. His hours will be from 9 p. m. to 5 a. m. during the summer months and from 9:30 p. m. to 5:30 a. m. during the winter. Demand for a night policeman was made by the business men after a series of robberies a few weeks ago. Money for the salary has been pledged largely by business houses and an automobile for his use is furnished by the Putnam Chevrolet Co., without charge. Mr. Chambers, a 29-year-old World War I veteran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Goldie Chambers, spent two years as a military policeman in the United States after a period of service in Alaska. He has been employed at Alameda prison farm for the last four years.

He is married and lives in California.

The Misses Kate and Laura Meyer were hostesses to the members of the Benevolent Society of the Christian church last Thursday afternoon. Miss Kate was honored by a gift from the church because she has held the longest continuous membership in the church. She became a member of the California Christian church in 1885. She was a charter member of the Benevolent Society, then called Aid Society, and was its first treasurer. The gift was presented by Mrs. E. A. Kibbe, president of the society.

Members of the Methodist church welcomed their new minister and his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. Kenneth Johnston, with a covered dish supper and old-fashioned pound gift party. The gifts consisted of canned goods, staple articles, vegetables from the gardens of the members and an electric toaster. Mrs. H. W. Crum made the presentation. The young people sang a song of welcome following the supper and L. P. Embury, representing the congregation, gave the address of welcome. The Rev. and Mrs. Johnston responded.

Embry, representing the congregation, gave the address of welcome.

More War Chips For U. S.?

The Newschart above gives a comparison of national income and military spending in the United States and in Russia. Figured in dollars, both nations are spending the same—about $15,000,000,000 yearly. But this represents 25 per cent of Russia's total income and only 7 per cent of ours. Demand being heard in Washington is that we increase our expenditures to $55,000,000,000, matching Russia's percentage-wise.

Espionage Charge To Rosenberg

FBI Charged Him With Plotting To Leak Atom Bomb Secret To Russians

NEW YORK, July 18—(AP)—An American-born engineer was arrested Monday and accused by the FBI of cloak-and-dagger recruiting for a Russian-financed atom bomb spy ring.

The FBI said the engineer, 32-year-old Julius Rosenberg, recruited another American—David Greenglass—into the spy ring.

Greenglass is one of three other Americans now under arrest on charges of betraying U. S. defense secrets to Russian agents.

Financed Spy Ring
Money behind the spy ring came from Anatoli Yakovlev, vice consul of the Soviet consulate in New York City, the FBI said.

The FBI said Rosenberg, a bespectacled, mustached man of medium height, lost an engineering job with the signal corps in 1945 because he was suspected of being a Communist.

Rosenberg, the FBI statement continued, made himself available to Soviet spies "so he could do the work he felt he was slated for and so he might do something to directly help Russia."

Handcuffed to two FBI agents, Rosenberg was taken to the federal building the later arraignment. He is charged with conspiring to commit espionage.

FBI director J. Edgar Hoover called Rosenberg "another important link in the Soviet espionage apparatus."

During the last two months the FBI took into custody Harry Gold, Philadelphia biochemist, Alfred Dean Slack, Syracuse, N. Y., scientist and David Greenglass, former U. S. Army sergeant, on similar charges.

Greenglass also is from New York City.

Each is charged with feeding top secrets on American defense to the Russians in wartime—a charge carrying the possible death penalty.

Each of the group is alleged to have collaborated with Dr. Klaus Fuchs, the top British atomic scientist who has been sent to prison in Great Britain for giving atomic secrets to the Soviet Union.

Corporation Owner
Rosenberg was identified in the FBI announcement as the owner and operator of Pitt Engine Products Inc., 370 East Houston St., New York City. He is married and has two children. His New York City home address was given as 30 Monroe St.

The FBI announcement, released through the justice department, asserted that Rosenberg recruited Greenglass, once attached to the Los Alamos, N. Mex., atom bomb project and had him make available classified, technical information on the A-bomb to both Gold and Rosenberg in 1945.

Hoover said that "Rosenberg gave Greenglass specific instructions as to the type of information Russia desired."

The announcement said a unique method was employed by the group to identify themselves to each other.

According to Hoover, Rosenberg in early 1945 gave Greenglass in New York City one half of an irregularly cut jello box top, the other half of which was given to Greenglass by Gold in Albuquerque, New Mex., as a means of identifying Gold to Greenglass. On this occasion in June, 1945, the FBI announcement said, "Greenglass was paid $500 by Gold who obtained it from his Soviet superior, Anatoli A. Yakovlev, vice consul of the Soviet consulate in New York City."

"Greenglass then turned over to Gold classified information he had secured from the atom bomb project at Los Alamos, where he was stationed at the time as a soldier."

U. S. Now Has Six Unified Commands Like MacArthur's In Vital World Spots

GEN. MORRIS: Caribbean Boss.

GEN. HANDY: Unified Europe.

ADM. FECHTELER: Atlantic.

ADM. RADFORD: Pacific Seas.

By DOUGLAS LAUSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)—Unified commands, with all the authority now wielded by Gen. Douglas MacArthur, have been set up in six major areas around the world where U. S. forces are located.

Each commander has been alerted for possible Communist aggression. Each one has full power to command all air, army and naval units in his area to check such action.

Military experts claim this arrangement gives Uncle Sam an unprecedented state of global preparedness. The five commanders—in addition to MacArthur—who hold this unique authority constitute a brand new level of command in America's armed forces.

Never before has the power to defend U. S. security abroad been concentrated in the hands of so few men. They are responsible only to the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the President of the United States. The areas assigned to them do not have fixed boundaries. The JCS retains control over the change in specific land and seas areas to meet changing tactical situations.

Here are the men, their areas of command, and the forces they have:

Maj. Gen. William E. Kepner, USAF, 57, former Marine, veteran of two world wars and a combat flier with 24 missions, is the new boss of the Alaskan command. That vital area includes the lands of Alaska proper, the seas around and the important Aleutian Islands.

Strategists call this command the one most likely to suffer first: attack in the event of all-out war with Russia. To defend it Kepner has a total of 12,000 men. Half are ground forces. The rest are in air units which include one strategic reconnaissance of 12 B-29s, one fighter group with 75 F-80s, an all-weather squadron of 12 planes and a troop carrier squadron of 12 C-54s. Also under his command are two small naval installations at Adak and Kodiak.

Lt. Gen. William H. H. Morris, Jr., USA, 50, veteran of World War I and last war's battles of Salerno, Bastogne and the Rhine break-through, bosses the Caribbean command. It includes the West Indies, Cuba, Canal Zone and Puerto Rico. He has 14,000 ground troops scattered around the islands. In addition he has roughly 6000 men about equally divided between air and naval units.

Lt. Gen. Thomas T. Handy, USA, 58, an artillery veteran of the first World War who served as assistant Chief of Staff during most of the last war, is boss of the unified German command. This includes forces in Germany, Austria, Trieste, and U. S. air units in England.

His ground forces include 100,000 troops, among which are 10,000 in Austria and 5000 in Trieste. His air strength consists of two fighter groups of 75 planes each and two troop carrier groups one of 36 heavy planes and the other

Van Natta Club Had Luncheon

The Van Natta Homemakers' hostess. At the noon hour a convivial luncheon was served to Mrs. Cecil Landes June 14th the members and children present with Mrs. Sam Long as assisting host.

The afternoon business meeting was opened by singing "The Missouri Hymn." Roll call was answered by 14 members on "planning I have used to hire an 'unusually view.' A discussion was held on what the club should exhibit for achievement day.

A cash donation was voted on to send the Mercy hospital in Kansas City. Plans were made for the July flower show with Mrs. George Buchholz and Mrs. Arthur Turner appointed to the committee. Mrs. Wesley Harding gave a reading "Nesting Time" by Lindburg. Mrs. Hubert Brown gave suggestions on preparations of foods for the freezer.

Secret pal gifts were received and the meeting adjourned with the reading of the club collect. Mrs. Edward Nelson, game leader lead the group in two contest games. Mrs. Sam Long and Mrs. Arthur Turner received awards.

Korean Blow Gives U N a Shot In the Arm

SUPER-CHARGED ATMOSPHERE This is the United Nations Security Council in action. At the moment this picture was taken, seven of the 11 members, including U. S. Delegate Warren Austin (1) were raising their hands to carry the resolution inviting the United States to name an over-all commander in Korea. Men in an uncontrollable seat is Russia's Constantin I. Zinchenko (2), who as assistant secretary-general for Security Council affairs must count the hands, read messages supporting the U. N. action. Next to him is the chair left vacant by Zinchenko's fellow countryman Jacob Malik, currently boycotting the Security Council.

EDITOR'S NOTE: What does the Korean crisis mean to the United Nations? What might it mean for the UN's future? Here's the first of two dispatches in a closeup report from Lake Success that tell how the machinery works how the UN hopes to see peace, and how the unexpected Korea blow was an unexpected shot in the arm for the UN.

By BRUCE BOSSART
NEA Staff Correspondent
LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y.—The cool, dust-free air is alive with the cadences and inflections of foreign speech. The voices are eager, cheerful, brightly tinged with hope. They're the voices of men who are toiling hard to preserve world peace.

This is the soft-toned delegates' lounge at United Nations headquarters, just before a UN Security Council meeting on the Korean war. Delegates UN staff people and newsmen mill about. Some stand in small clumps near the bar. Others recline on comfortable chairs sipping through foreign newspapers.

North Korea's aggression was a lightning bolt to a UN that languished half a year under a Russian boycott. The shock jolted the UN into vigorous new life and catapulted it back to the center of the world stage.

Talking in this super-charged atmosphere, the men in the lounge know all eyes are upon them once more. The knowledge is a tonic that will long outlast the original shock. It has affected everyone in this building. Each man's step is quicker, his thinking sharper and more incisive.

There's Sir Gladwyn Jebb, Britain's new representative on the council, thrust into the crisis from the moment of his arrival. A reporter has collared Yugoslavias Dr. Ales Bebler, who is an ally of the East and West. One by one the other council members appear.

In comes Warren Austin, captain of the home team. Balding, big-chested, his handsome healthy face set off by bankerish pince-nez, he moves around the room greeting friends warmly. Soon he grasps the arm of stocky Tyge Lie, UN secretary-general and the two talk quietly amid the buzz.

In a few moments discreet chimes sound and the delegates file across the hall into the council chamber.

The broad setting of this place is oddly contradictory. The UN's headquarters are in a low-lying buff brick factory, built during World War II and still partly used for manufacturing.

It's a tiny island of internationalism amid suburban Long Island sprawling acres of new red and white brick bungalows. The most thoughtless toward home family, the backyard garden and a day at the beach.

Inside the plant you're in a rooming house. Through the factory corridors walked a daily parade of blocks walk people from the four corners of the globe. Exotic dress and unfamiliar languages go unnoticed. Signs are in both English and French.

Only the orange tie eating of the lobbies a few key offices and the working chamber show any effort to disguise the blue factory. The Security Council chamber looks like a no-curtain radio studio.

The council members range themselves around a semi-circular table. They're here this time to act on a resolution that would force the UN's hand against the North Koreans.

In the bright glow of television lamps one after another the delegates from the various countries make their views known. There are ten in all. The 14th Jacob Malik of Russia, is absent—by design.

A snow of hands indicates no exclusion is called with the seven votes prescribed by UN rules. The performance seems rather cut and dried to hundreds of spectators who came to watch this fight for peace.

But like the work done in our own Congress, the real labor took place earlier. Representatives on the council, which as the peace-preserving agency is the UN's heart, have hammered out their differences in repeated councils and gorge among their makeshift offices. The smoothly-adopted

Board Adjourns For Inspection

After settling an ad valorem tax figure for all the car dealers in Sedalia and Pettis county, and appointing committees to make inspections on city and county real estate, the Board of Equalization adjourned Monday noon.

The board will reconvene this Saturday morning to hear reports of the inspection committees whose job will consist of inspecting all real estate properties that people have presented before the board as being assessed too high etc. during Board of Equalization sessions last week.

Those on the committees are City Inspection Committee Joseph Potts, Elmer Walde and Herb Stader, County Inspection Committee Lawrence C. Cligan, Ed Callis and W. L. Mallin.

The assessors in each committee will act as the group's chairman. After Saturday's meeting, notices will be sent out to all those whose assessed valuation of property has been lowered or raised. If the property owners are not satisfied with the board's adjustment they have a right to appeal before the appeal board on August 1.

Those on the board Monday morning were: Lawson Clingan, county assessor, Joseph C. Potts, city assessor, Mayor Herb Stader, J. V. Kesterson, W. L. Mallin, Ed Callis, county judges, Raymond Walde, county surveyor, and Lee Brandt, acting clerk.

Military Consider Use of A-Bomb

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON.—President Truman has received such grim reports on the Korean war that he not only decided on a special message to Congress asking for all-out controls, but also under consideration is the following drastic action:

1. A mass retreat, or Dunkerque, from Korea.
2. The unleashing of the atomic bomb.

Even early last week, military advisers warned the White House of the tragic possibility of a Korean Dunkerque and the evacuation of all American men and materials back to Japan. If Chinese Communist troops pour into Korea, they could force the outnumbered Americans into the sea. Therefore, a plan for wholesale evacuation is already prepared.

Simultaneously, an informal proposal has been made to issue an ultimatum to North Korea, warning the Communists to pull back to the 38th parallel or submit to atomic attack.

Military advisers to the President are considering both measures as desperate last resorts. One group is not anxious to use the atomic bomb, but they are convinced that Russia is still far behind the United States in atomic development, and that the men in the Kremlin would not risk an atomic war with us at this time.

Therefore, they argue that it would save American lives to make limited local use of the atomic bomb against North Korean troop concentrations and supply depots.

Another group of military advisers disagree with this. They believe that any use of the atomic bomb would: 1, provoke outright war with Russia; 2, lose us the moral support of the world and even of many people in our own country.

Why We're Losing
 Meanwhile, here are some of the blunt, cold facts about the Korean fighting:

1. The nucleus of the Korean army is Korean veterans trained by the Japanese. After fighting as part of the Japanese army for four years, they were taken over by the Russians following V-J day. Since then, they have been baptized by fire in Chinese fighting, and are now armed to the teeth with Russian equipment.

2. American troops not only are outnumbered but relatively green. While many of the officers and noncoms have seen combat service, most of the men in the ranks are young and, because of quick personnel turnovers, not always well-trained. Japan has been considered one of the easy Army berths, where living was cheap, servants numerous, and duties not arduous.

For instance, the commander of the First Cavalry Division, Maj. Gen. Hobart Gay, a fine officer, suffered a heart attack some time ago, and, not wanting to retire at the age of 56, Japan was picked for him as a sort berth. The First Cavalry Division, now armored, is supposed to be one of the crack combat outfits of the Regular Army. Yet its commander cannot pass a physical.

3. For reasons that the Army cannot adequately explain, our tanks are no match for the 60-ton Russian monsters with 12-inch armor. Our tanks were inferior to German tanks in the recent war, and they are still inferior to enemy tanks. Not only were Russian tanks better than ours during the war, but the Russians began improving their tanks after the war, while our biggest tank, the Patton, is only just arriving in Korea now.

Russian Sub Sighted

4. There is no question but that Russia is directing the Korean war. However, no Russians have actually been killed or captured. There have been a dozen reports, chiefly from South Koreans, of Russian officers at the front, and the Navy officially reported sighting one Russian submarine, which carefully stayed out of the range of American guns.

5. Nothing is being said about it publicly, but the grim Korean setbacks have raised doubts in the Pentagon building as to whether General MacArthur has the force and vigor necessary for the Korean campaign. Now 71 years old, MacArthur has been absorbed with political problems. While no one blames MacArthur for the difficulty of getting supplies to Korea, there is some resentment at his glowing promise to President Truman the night before the Korean decision was made, that he would "guarantee" success whether Russia came in or not.

Will Moscow Move?

Most worrisome development in the whole Korean defeat is the effect it is bound to have on other prospective Red moves—in Germany, Yugoslavia, Iran, Indo-China and Formosa. There are Communist troop concentrations in all these areas. If the Korean war had ended in a reasonably quick American victory, the effect on other Russian moves would have been extremely dampening. Now the opposite is bound to happen.

With American troops bogged down in Korea, Moscow is sure to be tempted to move in other areas. That is why backstage criticism of the military—including Secretary Johnson, General MacArthur, our lack of tank-planning, et al—is getting so vigorous.

The Other Wisconsin Senator

Cut off by an angry snort from President Truman, Wisconsin's windy, likable Senator Wiley spluttered and shut up the other day at a private White House conference on the Point Four program.

Wiley started out his usual jovial self, apparently not understanding too much about the Point Four program, which is to aid underdeveloped areas. Anxious to contribute his two cents worth, however, he blantly boomed:

"I hope you are not going to have this program administered by just another government bureau. I hope you are going to call in some people from the outside, some practical people who know something."

"I understood that you don't think anybody in the government knows anything," the President broke in coldly.

"Why, no, that is, I didn't mean . . ." spluttered the Senator from Wisconsin.

"That is the only inference I can take from your remark," snapped Truman.

Wiley said no more.

War Flashes

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan is considering a plan to store up surplus American grain in England now, as a protection against Soviet shocker submarines in case the war spreads to Europe. . . . Despite the intensity of the Korean battle, Russia has a 230-man mission stationed directly to General MacArthur's headquarters in Tokyo. . . . The British slipped steel, machine tools, and electrical equipment to North Korea right up to invasion day; and are still sending them to Communist China. In other words, British steel is now being used against American G.I.'s. . . . Intelligence reports pointing into the State Department show concrete evidence of Russian activity near Turkey, Trieste, Iran and Iraq, as well as a secret agreement between Albania and Bulgaria to start new trouble in Greece. Hottest spot of all is Yugoslavia.

Blame for Korean Reverses

Can be Laid in Public's Lap

By Bruce Blossat

As the war in Korea continues to go badly for our side, criticisms are bound to mount. People will be looking for scapegoats.

Some will blame the Administration, or particular parts of it like the State or Defense Departments. Others will jump on General MacArthur, or perhaps his field commanders.

Painful questions will be asked. Why haven't our troops made a better showing? Why haven't they got more and better equipment to fight with? Where are the planes and ships we need to displace reinforcements to back up the outnumbered Yank soldiers?

Superficially, the answers may not seem difficult to find, and they may indeed point to weakness and failure in our government. Not alone in the Administration but in Congress as well.

If the investigators and critics go back far enough, as they ought to do, they will find that when World War II ended we disbanded our huge army and navy with tremendous speed. The war over, we allowed our soldiers to cast aside their weapons and go home.

Into the world vacuum created by the swift dismantling of our military might moved the newly powerful Soviet Union. In the space of a few short years Russia was reaching out to draw within her orbit nations we had thought were safely free. When Czechoslovakia slid behind the Iron Curtain we became alarmed.

Suddenly the call went out to strengthen our defenses again. America's own military budgets were boosted, and soon we began pouring money to help arm friendly nations we thought could share the job of standing off militant communism.

Yet never in the two years since the arm was sounded have we grappled realistically with our defense needs. Big as the U. S. defense outlay has been, it hasn't been large enough to qualify as more than a token of our intent to resist.

All these decisions, from the wholesale disbanding of our World War II forces to the economies of 1949-50, can be ascribed either to the present Administration or to the Congress that have served since 1945.

But are they basically to blame?

The inescapable truth is that they did not keep a bigger defense establishment in being, or restore it once it had been broken up, because they did not believe public opinion would support such a program. President Truman and his advisers and the nation's top congressional leaders make a business of judging what the people will stand for. It was their considered view that a really adequate defense was not among those things.

Perhaps these men should have shown the wisdom and courage to lead public opinion rather than be guided by it; but the politicians, generally, do not like that course.

It is the American people themselves who have dictated the present state of our defenses. In the face of a clearly great menace from Russia, they have chosen to go on living comfortably, even luxuriously. They have wanted business as usual and life as usual.

The price of complacency and softness is often high. We're paying it now on top bloody battlefields in Korea. And we'll go on paying until we wake up to the kind of a fight we're in. Russia is playing for keeps, and we'd better learn to do the same.

Egypt Pouts

For a time it seemed that all the Arab states would follow the lead of Egypt in declining to support the United Nations' courageous move to halt Soviet aggression in Korea.

Now, however, the governments of such Near East nations as Lebanon and Syria have joined the remarkable union of freedom-loving peoples who are bent on crushing that invasion. It is heartening to see that, with the exception of Russia and her satellites, there are no blocs of nations in the UN which stand apart from the throng at this critical period.

Egypt's refusal to support military sanctions against the North Koreans is essentially a selfish act.

The Egyptians have a deep reservoir of bitterness against the British, and since the Palestine fighting they have had no love for the U. S. This was their chance to show their displeasure, and they seized it.

That other Arab states took a different course suggests they recognize that moments of mortal peril for the free world are no time to exhibit selfish pique.

So long as Egypt chooses to act from such motives, it is unlikely to enjoy its accustomed leadership in the Arab realm.

John 8:20; Ps. 1:1-6; Pet. 3:9-13
 EVIL IS SELF-DESTRUCTIVE

We have been discussing the Christian way as "the Way—note way, cut the way. In every possible situation it is the way to act. I can admit of no exceptions whatever. If one tries to act in some other way his sums won't come out right; he becomes tangled up."

Evil entangles every situation, for evil is against the nature of reality. Therefore, to try to straighten out a situation by an evil is only to entangle it more. Therefore evil is not only evil it is stupid. Somebody has suggested that the word "evil" is the word "live" spelled backward. It is—well, it's the will to live put into reverse; it is the turning against itself. Man's nature is allergic to evil. Evil is the way man's nature is not made to work. In evil life desires to gain freedom, but gets only the freedom to destroy itself. It runs away—don't surrender! It revolts—against life.

Some schoolboys were allowed to take a slot machine apart to study its inner workings. They found that the machine in its inner constitution was made to give up only one dime, it then to the player. The players might lose and lose and call on Lady Luck, but in the end there would be one result, and only one result—one dime for her was the average. Luck was not against them—the machine was against them. So every morning the machine would be empty, and every night it would be full. Men had figured it out scientifically by the law of averages, and had built that knowledge into the machine. Anyone who tries to beat that machine is not merely bad; he's a fool!

Every sinner therefore turns out to be one thing and one thing alone—a problem to himself and others. God has us hooked—we cannot revolt against God without revolting against ourselves. If you clash with God you clash with yourself! The attempt to disprove this statement has filled the world with human wreckage. Every man who tries it, thinks that he will be an exception, but there are no exceptions.

My Father, Thou hast made it impossible for me to hurt or harm myself without Thy protest. The penalties attached to evil are not the signs of Thy wrath, but of Thy love—Thy redeeming love. Help me to work with that love—not against it, Amen.

The Doctor Says—

Science is Searching for New Chemicals to Kill Off Insects

By EDWIN P. JORDAN, M. D.
 Written for NEA Service

The constant battle against harmful insects, particularly those that cause such important diseases of human beings as malaria, yellow fever, plague and typhus, has made great progress. Control measures aimed at preventing insects from carrying human diseases have been actively pushed for only 35 years.

At first about all that could be done was to drain or destroy the breeding places for mosquitoes, or by pulling fish into the pools where they breed, spraying oily substance over the surface, and measures of a similar nature.

Paris green came along a little later. Other insect-killing substances like pyrethrum have been extracted from the mosquito in an improved in their killing powers, and attempts to create resistance or immunity from the standpoint of the battle humanity in people. These trials, against insects World War II was however, have not been wholly a great success; better chemicals successful.

D. D. T. is not perfect in all respects—for example, house flies which are exposed to it gradually become resistant. Consequently, the search goes on for new and better insect killers.

But it is not disease alone which make insects our enemies; the ordinary mosquito bite is uncomfortable enough. The reaction to mosquito bites is not always alike. In some people a bite will cause swelling and severe itching, while in others the reaction is slight and lasts only a short time.

When the mosquito bites, it probably pushes something into the skin but just what this substance is still a matter of debate. It is generally believed to be similar to the chemical which bees inject when they sting.

There have been times at making substances like pyrethrum have been extracted from the mosquito in an improved in their killing powers, and attempts to create resistance or immunity from the standpoint of the battle humanity in people. These trials, against insects World War II was however, have not been wholly a great success; better chemicals successful.

'Where Are You Going, My Little One?'

LITTLE DOC
 Copyright 1950 by NEA Service, Inc.

VIII

LITTLE DOC soon regretted his remark about wasting valuable time. The tall man settled down to a long, steady trot—the cowhand's trot, which is no hard-ship at all on a man who is used to spending long hours in the saddle. But every trot step was torture for the blindfolded John Sand.

Little Doc clung to the saddle horn with both hands. He tried to stand in the stirrup leathers that rubbed his shins raw. Every inch of the ride, which must have been 10 or 12 miles and to Little Doc seemed like a hundred miles, was torture. He was gray with pain and fatigue and dizzy from being blindfolded when at last his captor drew up.

"Get off your horse," the tall man broke his long silence as he dismounted and stood beside Little Doc's mount. "We're going the rest of the way afoot."

During the long ride, Little Doc's blindfold had slipped a little—enough for him to look around.

It was getting daylight and he could see a lot of brush and rocks and the muddy water of the Missouri river. They had not crossed the river yet and Wolf Point was on the north bank. He could make out a clearing and a horse pasture that held a lot of horses. A round pole corral and a log barn and again with the door closed.

Little Doc was so stiff that the man had to drag him from the saddle and steady him until he got his footing. Then he untied the black dog from the saddle. The black silk handkerchief the man wore for a mask had slipped down around his neck and Little Doc got a good look at him. He was a big, rawboned man with a long thin nose and underslung jaw and pale mean eyes.

Doc remembered the man now. He was one of Blackjack Lambert's palbearers. Kit Carson had pointed him out the day of the funeral.

"Long Andy Anders. Dusty Rhodes once caught him stealing some Rocking R horses and sent him to prison. Blackjack got him out on parole last month. He has a place a few miles down the river. He's bad medicine," Kit had told him.

Somewhere in the distance sounded the mournful wail of a locomotive whistle and a wolf picked up the echo and howled in the gray dawn. Little Doc shivered a little.

Long Andy's gun prodded him in the back. "Step along, Doc. I've got your bag."

He was half way across the clearing when Long Andy's voice sounded behind him. "I thought so. You slipped your blindfold. You shouldn't do that. Sometimes it don't pay a man to see too much."

He reached and pulled the blindfold from Little Doc's face and stuffed it in his pocket.

The cabin door opened cautiously and a man stood back in the shadow of the unlighted cabin. "You fetch the Doc?" a voice called.

"Got him. I had him blindfolded and I look him the long way around, thinkin' to throw him off. But the blindfold slipped and he's seen too much for his own good."

Little Doc grabbed his bag from the lanky man's hand and headed for the cabin.

"You waste too much time talkin'," Doc retorted. "Light a light," he said to the man blocking the doorway with a gun in his hand.

A low moan came from somewhere on the floor. Doc looked down and saw a man on a tarp-covered roundup bed spread on the hard-packed dirt floor of the log cabin.

The wounded man's face was slimy with cold sweat and the color of his skin had a greenish pallor. He looked up at Little Doc with glazed eyes, as the medical man knelt and pulled the tarp back gently. The man's shirt and blood-stained overalls had been taken off and his long underwear was sodden with blood. A nauseating stench came from him.

He had been shot in the belly and gargle had set in. The wounded man was dying. He would be dead in a few hours at the longest. Doc pulled the blood-stained tarp back over him and gave him a hypodermic. The man never moved and his glazed eyes saw nothing.

LITTLE DOC went to the door and motioned the two men outside. "If I'd gotten here yesterday, or soon after it happened, I might have saved his life, but I doubt it. The man will be dead in a few hours. I gave him a shot of dope to ease the pain."

He held up a hand when Long Andy was about to open his mouth. "I don't care who you are. I don't want to know anything about you or your business. It's part of my doctor's job to keep his mouth shut and betray no secrets. There is nothing more I can do for that man. If you will point out the trail, I'll find my way back to town."

"Like fun you will!" Long Andy had his six-shooter in his hand. "You ain't got no power!" (To Be Continued)

Mothers Who Yell at Children Are Inviting a Free-for-All

A woman educator has the theory that much American tension and unhappiness could be reduced, if "quiet" voices were used in homes and schools.

She's testing out the theory in her own school. It might not be a bad idea for mothers to test it out in their own homes.

BY HAL COCHRAN

Some television comedians are funny only in that they think they are.

We've never heard of the game of love being called on account of darkness.

Most of us think we could do much better if we only had the opportunity which we don't realize we have—because we're too lazy.

Speaking of jam sessions—they're on right now, with straw-berry in season.

Yelling at children is a bad habit: too many mothers indulge in it. They not only yell at the children when the children get out of hand but they yell at them just to relieve their own nerves.

Mama fights with Papa in the morning and yells at the kids all day long. Or Mama gets herself into a dither trying to do more in one day than is necessary or possible, and relieves the tension under which she is working by yelling at the kids.

And when nobody in the family is yelling, very likely the radio is turned up so loud that voices coming out of it are far too loud.

Memphis, Tenn.—a city likes peace and quiet—banned automobile horn-blasting and it didn't seem to interfere with an automobile's getting where it was going.

Soft Voices Can Command Attention

Very likely the same thing would happen in homes. Mama would probably find she could get just as much obedience, if not more, by using a quiet voice when she tells Junior to quit whatever he's doing as by yelling at him.

This yelling at children is really a vicious thing. Did you ever notice how often the mother who yells at her children has children who yell right back at her?

Also, that the mother who yells her last threat has a child who doesn't obey her until he hears that final yell?

By George W. Cornell
(For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK—(P)—They're the kind of women that never settle down for long in one place. Except for that, each of them has a special character of her own.

At least they do for Coast Guardsman John "Frenchie" L'Hommiedieu, who for nearly 15 years has been watching the damsel of the deep that glide in and out of New York harbor.

"Some people like to watch the girls go by on Fifth avenue," he said. "But I'll take the ship parade any day."

The world's sea-going scroviety stages a continuous show in the busy harbor, and to the regular waterfront spectator, each oceanic lady has a distinctive personality.

Some are sleek, trim and fast. Some are big and broad. Some are haughty, some massive and stately; some ugly, and some as pretty as a girl in a summer dress.

"But they're all like women," said L'Hommiedieu. "It takes a man to handle them. It takes a lot of powder and paint to keep them going. And they got to keep dressed up, or they look like the devil."

Some of them slide into the harbor, their bows riding high, so that they have an expression just like they're happy and glad to get here," he said. "Others have a sure, blunt nose on them."

Warrant Boatswain L'Hommiedieu is skipper of a coast guard cutter that hauls public health officers, customs and immigration agents and newspapermen out to meet incoming ships.

"Ships are beautiful creatures," he said. "But they're one kind of women I don't care to be with in the dark. When the fog's thick out there, those babies are liable to do you in."

European ships, particularly French and Italian liners, have more charm than most American vessels, in L'Hommiedieu's opinion. They keep "dolled up in brighter colors," he said.

Moreover, he added, most U.S. ships don't have the "streamlined figures or the pretty curves" of the European numbers.

"If you're interested in the kind of ocean-going maiden that's neat, fresh and clean-looking, L'Hommiedieu said that Scandinavian ships are tops.

But he has a warm regard for three American sisters that ply South American waters—the Santa Rosa, Santa Paula and Santa Sofia.

"Rosa, Paula and Sofia are real cuties," he said. "They aren't too big and they aren't too small, and everything is in the right place."

When it comes to voices, L'Hommiedieu likes to listen to the big British Queens—the Mary and Elizabeth. "I like to hear them talk," he said. "They got a husky deep tone."

But the first love of the man who welcomes the world's ships into New York harbor is the Stockholm, a Swedish liner. Said L'Hommiedieu:

"Man O Man. What a ship! She is beautiful and she is stacked. She's a smoky blonde, and she's got the class. Eleven hundred tons of comp!"

By Hal Boyle
Even the blind and the halt among America's veterans want to help their country in the Korean crisis. Disability hasn't dimmed their sense of patriotic duty.

This observation comes from a lady who works for the Veterans Administration in Boston. She wrote me a letter on how veterans feel about the present situation in the Far East, and I think it's worth passing on, because I feel it is typical.

"Here in Boston," she wrote, "we have a number of amputees, several blind veterans and others with more or less serious disabilities, helping other veterans with their problems. We also have many men who have seen service in both world wars."

"Most of them have the idea of more fighting. Most of them feel that war is not inevitable. Not one of the men—or women—I've talked to wants to go back in service, if it's possible to avoid it."

"However, they all think that Korea is a testing ground, and that the United States is perfectly right in backing up its promises with force. Most of them feel that it develops into World War III—well, better now than later."

"Most of them are ready to go back into service, if the government says they're needed—and that includes the amputees and the blind vets, who feel they can be of use behind the lines, just as they are of importance now to the Veterans Administration because of their training and experience and because of their understanding of the difficulties encountered by other disabled veterans."

"The fact that these men—and women—are not rushing to recruiting offices to sign up for another hitch doesn't mean anything. Most of us have responsibilities that we didn't have ten years ago. We're all older, and we know only too well that war isn't a picnic. That also, by the way, seems to be the attitude of most of the kids who are signing up."

"The reason a lot of them don't follow the stories of the Korean fighting too closely is that they know too much about fighting—the news for the same reason a family watching one of its members die of cancer doesn't talk too much about the victim's agony."

"It doesn't mean a lack of sympathy or interest—just a realization that talk is cheap, and action is what counts."

I think this woman's letter—she requested that I not use her name—sums up the way most Who's Going to be Drafted?

Here's a Clear Picture of First Draft Call

REGISTRATION: Korean crisis brought out this lineup of 18-year-olds to register with a New York draft board. All boys are required to register with their local boards when they turn 18, but they can't be called up until their 19th birthday.

By DOUGLAS LARSEN
NEA Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Who's going to be drafted?

First, you must be between 19 and 25, single, fairly sturdy, and a non-veteran. That's the first step to qualify among the 20,000 men in the first Korean crisis draft.

If you get your notice of induction after you are properly enrolled in college or high school, this fall you'll be exempted from the draft until June, 1951. The Army plans to start taking in the first men about the middle of September, so there will be some close calls.

If you're in service or in a reserve component of the service, you are excluded. But your outfit can be called into active duty any time, although there are no plans now to do this soon.

There are a few men in the 25-29 age group who might possibly be exempted by reason of working on farms or in jobs essential to national health, safety or interest. Selective Service officials say you'd have to be "irreplaceable" to qualify for deferment under this provision.

You stay home if you're an elected public official or an appointed judge. You're exempted if you're the sole surviving son of a family that has already lost sons in war. You don't have to go if you're a minister or divinity student.

And now they're ready for the final taping. At present there are about 1,466,629 who are ready for that letter. Instead of a lottery as in the last war the oldest 25-year-olds will be taken first, then the 24's, the 23's and so on down to the 19-year-olds.

The estimate is that not many Americans, old or young, feel to say about Korea.

There is a great yearning for peace, a great wish that the issue raised by the North Korean invasion had never arisen. But there is also a full-hearted determination to see that issue through, because what we stand for as a people is at stake.

Somehow, I wish Joe Stalin in the Kremlin could read that Boston woman's letter—and understand the sentiment behind it. It might give him something to ponder—an insight into how the American democracy operates.

men under 23 will get called in the September induction. However, each board is assigned a quota of men to produce. And it's quite possible that even some 18-year-olds will get the call this first time from some local boards that don't have enough older men to fill their quotas.

After the first call, there are a lot of "ifs" in the future. The Army says that if there are enough volunteers there won't be any more drafting. It's planned to keep draftees 21 months, but it looks like the Korean crisis is easing off, they might be released after a year's service.

If the crisis gets more acute, it's planned to call up another 20,000 in October. That's long range planning subject to many changes. If all-out war comes, forget everything you've just read because a whole new draft law will be written.

As far as the current draft goes there will be thousands of borderline cases which will have to be decided by local boards and the Army doctors. Some pretty healthy-looking men will rate 4-F according to present Army standards. That includes men adjudged physically, mentally and morally unfit. At present there are no plans to put conscientious objectors into special camps.

A man qualifies as a deferred veteran if he served one year before Pearl Harbor or after V-E Day, or served 90 days during the shooting war. A man qualifies as having a dependent if he supports a wife or child or other close members of his family.

Since 1948 all boys reaching the age of 18 should have registered with their local boards, although they can't be called until their 19th birthday. Those who haven't registered probably won't be punished if they do so promptly. Those who have been examined and classified once will have to have another physical to bring their status up-to-date. Some boards may order this at once, others later.

Every man has a right to appeal any classification assigned to him by a local board, if he thinks it unjust. After the draft mill starts rolling for a man it usually takes a minimum of two months to get him in uniform.

The Army will get all of the first 20,000 men. The Air Force and Navy have enough volunteers.

State To Revive Defense Program

JEFFERSON CITY, July 18—(P)—Missouri's World War II civilian defense program is going to be revived, Gov. Forrest Smith announced.

He said he planned to appoint a new state Council of Defense under a 1941 law within the next few days. The groundwork already has been laid by Brig. Gen. John A. Harris, assistant general, the governor said.

He reported Harris already is working with the Red Cross in a survey of shelter, feeding, water, transportation and other defense facilities within a 120-mile radius of Kansas City and St. Louis. The survey starts this week.

In the last war the Defense Council at one time had more than 326,000 Missourians listed for various defense jobs—air raid and five wardens, victory gardeners, ration board volunteers, first aid specialists, salvage collectors and so on.

Smith said establishment of a new Defense Council was recommended by the National Security Resources Board.

The old cna, which had 70 members, was appointed in 1941 by former Gov. Forrest C. Donnell. He served as chairman and Hugh Stephens, Jefferson City banker, was vice chairman. The council included leaders in industry, labor, agriculture, education, health, welfare and other fields. The 1941 law is still on the books, Smith said, and will be used to set up a new defense framework. Of course, he added, the 1950 organization will not be as elaborate unless the Korean conflict develops into a full scale world war.

Will Assign Jaycees To Various Committees

Board members of the Sedalia Junior Chamber of Commerce conducted a meeting Monday evening in the senior Chamber of Commerce office.

They discussed the State JCC Board meeting held over the week-end in Sedalia, and from the committee reports. It was agreed it met with a signal success.

A thorough discussion was held on the state fair project. The Jaycees plan to sponsor a "hot dog" stand at the fair grounds this August.

It was passed by the board, that all local Jaycees will be assigned to various committees at the next regular dinner meeting, Thursday evening at 8:15 o'clock at the Pioneer Room.

The Sedalia Jaycees will challenge the Jefferson City Jaycees, in a softball meet at the Center park, Wednesday night, August 2.

Salem, Mass., was once known as the "pepper port," because so much pepper was imported through there.

Included men will go to one of four training divisions at Fort Dix, N.J., Fort Knox, Ky., Fort Riley, Kas., and Fort Ord, Calif. Basic training will last 14 weeks.

After basic training the men will be distributed in the Army to fill out various units. None will see immediate action in Korea. Whether any of them ever will depends on the course of events.

5 Americans Die In Crash

Transport Plane Crashed In India With 22 Aboard

NEW DELHI, India, July 18—(P)—An Indian transport plane crashed Monday in high Kashmir mountains, killing all 22 persons aboard, including five Americans.

The Indian National Airways, owner of the two-engine Dakota, said the victims included:

Col. Perry Brown, new American military observer with the United Nations commission for India and Pakistan (the Kashmir Commission).

Lt. Col. Robert Mayfield, also an American military observer, recently transferred from Tokyo.

Sanford Major of Williston Park Long Island, N. Y., representative of the U. N. secretariat with the Kashmir Commission.

Miss S. A. Bruton and Miss E. Bradfield, two employees of the American embassy in New Delhi.

Lt. Col. K. K. Singh, Indian army liaison officer with the U. N. military observers.

Dr. Karl Pereira, Austrian charge d'affaires in New Delhi.

Brig. H. H. Angle, of Canada, chief military observer for the commission. Angle, 48, served in World War II in Italy and northwestern Europe. After the war, before going with U. N., he was a magistrate.

The wrecked plane carried 18 passengers and a crew of four.

The wreckage was reported found in the bed of the Chaki river 12 miles south of Pathankot.

The Dakota took off from New Delhi at 9:15 a. m. (11:15 p. m. Eastern Standard Time Sunday)
